

LG Health Retirement Program Introduces New Tool to Help Employees Manage Student Loan Debt

Penn Medicine Lancaster General Health is committed to being a place where we can all collectively Live Our Legacy; succeeding together and establishing ourselves by thinking and acting for the future, including thinking ahead to your retirement needs. LG Health leverages Prudential Financial for employee retirement plans and to provide financial wellness tools and resources to help you live your best financial life.

Log in to your account at lghealthretire.org and visit the My Financial Life tab to review the most recent financial tools available to you.

Among the most recently introduced resources is Prudential's Student Loan Assistance tool, which provides retirement plan participants student loan debt guidance through repayment scenarios. In addition to the repayment scenarios, the Student Loan Assistance tool can connect you to virtual one-on-one repayment counseling, all free as a LG Health retirement plan participant.

If you have questions about your retirement benefits or would like to discuss the available financial tools and resources, contact Mike Phyllaier, our on-site Prudential Counselor, call 1-844-544-7381 and select option 2, or submit your request online.
